Contributor’s List

Claire Bénit-Gbaffou is a Professor is in the School of Architecture and Planning at the University of the Witwatersrand interested in urban politics and governance. She is the acting Director of the Center for Urbanism and the Built Environment Studies and previously directed Yeoville Studio (2010-2012), a community-oriented research initiative spearheaded by the School in partnership with Yeoville community organisations.

Deepa Chopra is a research fellow at the Institute of Development Studies with extensive experience in social protection and livelihoods programmes. Her work has primarily been on examining policy processes through the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MNREGA) of India. She also has expertise in the areas of citizen engagement with the state, participation of civil society actors in policy processes, and governance and accountability issues.

Brahm Fleisch is Professor in the Division of Education Leadership and Policy Studies in Wits School of Education. His interests include education planning, school effectiveness/improvement, educational finance and systemic change. His book, Managing Educational Change: the State and School Reform in South Africa (Heinemann) provides a comprehensive account of educational transformation in South Africa since 1994. From 1995 to 2000, Prof. Fleisch served as Director of Education for the Gauteng Provincial Government.

Lopita Huq is a Research Fellow at BRAC Development Institute (BDI), BRAC University. She has been involved in research since 1994, working mostly with Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies (BIDS), The Population Council, New York and IDS, Sussex University. Her main area of interest is around gender and social change.

Paul Kingston is as Associate Professor of Political Science and International Development Studies and the Director of the Centre for Critical Development Studies at the University of Toronto Scarborough. His research interests revolve around questions of the politics and power that underpin the dynamics of development and/or underdevelopment, with a regional focus on the Middle East. His most recent book is Reproducing Sectarianism: Advocacy Networks and the Politics of Civil Society in Postwar Lebanon.

Simeen Mahmud is Lead Researcher at the BRAC Development Institute, BRAC University where she also coordinates the Centre on Gender and Social Transformation. She is a former Research Director at the Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies (BIDS). Her current work is on labour market dynamics, microfinance and gender norms.

Ranjita Mohanty is a Political Sociologist based in New Delhi. Her specialization includes: social movements, civil society, democracy, participation, and social exclusion/inclusion. Dr. Mohanty is a Fulbright Fellow and co-editor of two books: Does Civil Society Matter? Governance In Contemporary India and Participatory Citizenship: Issues of Identity, Exclusion, Inclusion.
Laurence Piper is Professor of Political Science at the University of the Western Cape. He is interested in informal urban life in the global south, and the implications for citizenship and democracy. Within this broad frame, issues of participation and representation, identity and inclusion, and violence and reconciliation are recurring themes.

Roberta Rice is an Adjunct Professor at the University of Guelph in Canada. She is author of The New Politics of Protest: Indigenous Mobilization in Latin America’s Neoliberal Area. She is currently working on a comparative project on indigenous rights and representation in Canada and Latin America.

Steven Robins is a Professor in the Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology at the University of Stellenbosch. He has published on a wide range of topics including the politics of land, 'development' and identity in Zimbabwe and South Africa; the Truth & Reconciliation Commission (TRC); urban studies and most recently on citizenship and governance.

Shylashri Shankar is a Senior Fellow at the Centre for Policy Research in New Delhi. She has held academic positions at the University of Texas at Austin and the Center on Religion and Democracy, University of Virginia. She is the author of Scaling Justice: India’s Supreme Court, Anti-Terror Laws and Social Rights, and co-author (with Raghav Gaiha) of Battling Corruption: Has NREGA Reached India’s Rural Poor.

Alex Shankland is Research Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies, Sussex with over two decades' experience of working in Brazil, Peru, Angola and Mozambique as a researcher, NGO manager and social development consultant. His current research interests centre on democratic representation and citizen-state engagement, with particular reference to the political strategies of indigenous peoples and other marginalised minorities.

Bettina von Lieres is a Lecturer at the University of Toronto Scarborough in the Centre for Critical Development Studies. Her current research focuses on new forms of citizen participation in the global South. Recent publications include Mobilizing for Democracy: Citizen Action and the Politics of Participation (co-edited with Vera Schattan Coelho).

Laura Trajber Waisbich is a political scientist and international relations analyst. She is a researcher at the Brazilian Center of Analysis and Planning (Cebrap), working on social participation, public policies analysis, and south-south development cooperation. Laura also works for Conectas Human Rights, a Brazilian rights-group. Ms. Waisbich chapter is based on research conducted in 2009-2010 for her Master’s thesis.